

ABSTRACT

Level shifter modules, used in integrated circuits (ICs), are automatically inserter and their correctness verified. A level shifter module for signals crossing voltage domains is generated, and instances thereof are inserted in a pre-determined voltage domain. Several checks ensure the correctness of the inserted level shifter module. The level shifter modules are instantiated based on user-defined voltage constraints.

